ITALIAN WINE SNO-GEMR NO-GEMR NO-GEMR

Terroir

Originally a French term, the word is used to describe the specific and unique characteristics of an area or region. It is derived from “terre”, which means “land”, but this is just one small part of the overall idea. The area where the grapes for a particular wine are grown is defined by the soils, microclimates, topography and farming and cultivation methods. These unique conditions and characteristics have a profound impact on the wine produced, so much so it is said the land itself can be tasted.

75cl    % 14    100% Nebbiolo

Taste
In a word intense! High in tannins, high in acidity, moderate to high alcohol levels, full-bodied wine. It is a powerful wine that should be enjoyed with food. And, it's moderately fruity, black cherries blackberries some red cherries, cranberries.

Flavour
Full-flavored wine with considerable intensity. However, that intensity typically doesn't come from dense, ripe fruit flavors but more from its earthy acidity and tannins that bolster its aromatic fruit.

Pairing
Consider dishes with braised or roasted dark meats and rich sauces. One should also keep in mind that Barolo's high acidity helps it pair beautifully with richer,

Some examples of Chablis can have an earthy "wet stone" flavor that intensifies as it ages, before mellowing into delicate honeyed notes.

Flavour

The wines often have a "flinty" note, sometimes described as "goût de pierre à fusil" (gunflint) and sometimes as "steely".

Pairing

This particular wine pairs well with seafood, especially with grilled fish and oysters. It is also perfect when partnered with goat cheese or any of the white proteins.
